Neighbor testifies in knifing trial

Trial in relation to murdered student expected to last until middle of next week

BOB JACOBINI
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Saturday night quiet in Herrin was shattered by "God awful banging" and two men's voices yelling.

"Then one voice dominated," Tammy Woolard testified Wednesday in the trial of Steven Crutchfield.

Crutchfield, 30, is charged with three counts of first-degree murder in relation to the April 3 stabbing death of Michael Sasso, 20, an SIUC sophomore in administration of justice.

Woolard, a neighbor of Crutchfield's estranged wife, Tracie, said in Williamson County Court she ran to her bedroom window that night to see where the noise was coming from. "I saw [Sasso] running out. He was just saturated with blood," she said.

Sasso ran stumbling to the Woolard house, Woolard said, and cried, "Help me please. I'm dying."

"There was just blood pouring out of this boy. It was coming out of his chest so fast that it was bubbling. I've never seen anything like it," she testified.

The Crutchfields were living apart at the time of the killing.

Sasso was Tracie's lover, Tracie said Wednesday under oath. The two became intimate in March, just weeks before Sasso's death.

Woolard also said she saw Tracie's 3-year-old child appear to be thrown out the front door of the Crutchfield house the night Sasso was killed.

"She fell and skidded. It was horrible," Woolard said. "I saw a baby come out of the door, and I saw Tracie coming out trying to catch the baby. And then I saw a shadow."

Woolard could not say if the shadow was Steven Crutchfield. But Tracie Crutchfield said it was Steven, now her ex-husband, who broke the door locks on her Herrin home and mortally stabbed Sasso.

The killing was premeditated, Williamson County State's Attorney Chuck Garnati said in his opening statement.

Defense attorney Larry Broeking reserved his opening statement until after the prosecution case is finished.

Based on court documents filed in June and questions posed to prospective jurors, however, he appears to plan a defense based on insanity or diminished capacity.

Garnati said Wednesday his case should last until about noon Thursday. He predicted the trial would last through Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

The trial will resume today at 9 a.m.

Vice chancellor finalists back up to three

TIM CHAMBERLAIN

Another finalist was announced in the search for a vice chancellor for Student Affairs Wednesday, bringing the candidate pool back up to three.

Larry H. Dietz, vice chancellor for Student Affairs and Enrollment Management at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, will visit SIUC Wednesday and Thursday for interviews with students, faculty and staff.

Dietz replaces Charles B. Kenyon, assistant vice president for Student Affairs at the State University of New York at Buffalo, as the third finalist for the position after Kenyon withdrew from the search Sept.

24 because of a family disagreement about moving from the Buffalo, N.Y., area to Southern Illinois.

Thomas Guernsey, interim vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, announced the third candidate Wednesday. He said the addition of Dietz only helps the search.

"The addition of a third candidate is not an indication of the quality of the other two candidates," Guernsey said. "It reflects a desire to have a deeper pool to choose from."

Dietz is a native of Southern Illinois, having grown up in De Soto and attended Carbondale Community High School before receiving his bachelor's in political science from SIUC in 1970. Dietz also has a master's in higher education and personnel and a doctorate in professional studies, both from Iowa

George Anthony Antonelli, a finalist for the University's vice chancellor for Student Affairs, says he is one administrator who cannot be kept away from students by sitting in a stuffy office all day.

"I like to walk around. That's the kind of person I am," Antonelli said. "I came here a day early and walked around and talked to students."

"You'd probably have to be putting a chain on me to keep me in the office."

The vice chancellor for Student Affairs at SIUC is responsible for administration of financial aid, health services, University housing, the Student Center and is the dean of students.

Antonelli met with students and faculty at open forums Tuesday and Wednesday to discuss his qualifications and any questions and concerns attendees may have had.

To Antonelli's disappointment, only five students were present at the forum and only two faculty members were present during the faculty session Wednesday.

Some of the issues discussed during the student forum included how Antonelli would handle certain situations on campus, such as the closing of the Strip and the lack of social activities for minority students.

Antonelli said that because he does not have any direct information on these issues, he could not explain what he would do.

Dietz served as associate director of financial aid at Iowa State from 1972 to 1985.

He has been in his current position for the past year and has been with the University of Missouri-Kansas City since leaving Iowa State, serving as an assistant vice chancellor for Student Affairs and an associate chancellor with UMKC during that time.

During the candidate's visit, he will meet with constituency groups in the University Museum Auditorium.

Dietz will meet with administrative and professional staff Wednesday from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m., and with students from 11:15 a.m. to noon. Civil service staff can meet with Dietz Thursday from 10 to 11 a.m., and his forum with faculty is from 11 a.m. to noon.

The two other candidates in the search are George Anthony Antonelli, associate vice president for Student Services and Special Programs

Students propose to change alcohol policy

KENDRA THORSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A student-designed proposal presented to interim Chancellor John Jackson Wednesday may change the alcohol policy of Select 2000, allowing fraternity houses to possess alcohol under certain circumstances.

Interim Provost Tom Guernsey submitted the proposal, called the SIUC Greek Millennium Initiative, to Jackson after receiving it from students Oct. 1. Among other issues, the proposal examines alcohol use in the Select 2000 program.

The report will be reviewed by Jackson in the upcoming weeks.

The SIUC Greek Millennium Initiative involves the need for increased community service and increased involvement in greek campus life. Additionally, students composed a list of regulations fraternity houses must follow. These include rules permitting 21-year-old fraternity brothers to keep alcohol in rooms and allowing three alcoholic social events annually.

Sorority houses will remain dry because of national rules.

The task force, a student group composed of five greek leaders that was created by former chancellor Jo Ann Argeringer, was asked to evaluate the two-year pilot program in 1998. Led by Guernsey, the group drafted the proposal to make a compromise with some of the controversial aspects of Select 2000.

Select 2000 banned alcohol in chapter houses since 1998. The alcohol ban was imposed, in part, to help the SIUC greek system improve its image and rediscover the original ideals of greek life. SIUC is one of four universities in the nation striving to attain these goals by the year 2000.

According to Brienne Cichella, Inter-Greek Council president, the task force will try to make changes to Select 2000 to better adapt the program to the greek system.

"We want to propose a lot of different objectives, because Select 2000 does not fit the greek community," Cichella said. "Select 2000 was the least positive experience the greek system underwent in the past three years."

Cichella, a member of the task force and a senior in speech communication from Rockford, said the task force's main goal is to make Select 2000 more beneficial to the greek system or try to terminate the program.

"We are working with the administration on better suiting the greek system," she said. "For the betterment of SIUC students and greeks, the best thing to do would be to abolish the program."

Although many greeks are eagerly awaiting Jackson's decision, this is not the greeks' first attempt to alter Select 2000 with the aid of University officials. In 1997, a proposal called "The Challenge" was formulated to improve Select 2000 by allowing alcohol in certain fraternities, but the proposal failed because the administration never took action.

Guernsey said that although the new proposi-al is in its early stages, students have devoted much time to the document, and many greeks are hoping for approval.

"The students have put a lot of effort into this proposal," Guernsey said. "They have made an effort to recognize the concerns of fellow students, along with their concerns about Select 2000."

Since Select 2000's development, four fraternities have lost their charters, two of which the University took away because of alleged violations of alcohol provisions and alleged hazing incidents.

Sean Henry, Undergraduate Student Government president, said the concerns of the students are best met when they take action.

"I think the goal of the task force is to replace the name of Select 2000," Henry said. "The best way to make changes is to have the students draw up proposals and present them to the administration."

Jenny Price, president of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, said she wants the students and administration to work together to enforce changes in Select 2000 to compromise the needs of the University.

"I don't think that people like it when things are forced upon them," she said. "I think we should devise a program together so all parties will be happy."

Gus Bode

Gus says:

Maybe the greeks will finally be able to drink legally.

"We want to propose a lot of different objectives, because Select 2000 does not fit the greek community."

David Nelson Band journeys through Carbondale

KELLY HERTLEIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Stuffing a guitar into its case and packing the essential clothing needed for a long Odyssey, Barry Sless prepares for his departure on a rock 'n' roll tour.

"It is a musical journey we are on," he said. "It's all about playing well together."

Sless is the guitarist and pedal steel player for the David Nelson Band, which will perform at 10 tonight at the Copper Dragon Brewing Co., 700 E. Grand Ave.

Celebrating the band's fifth year together, Sless said he and fellow band members David Nelson, Mookie Siegel, Bill Laymon and Arthur Steinhorn arrange American roots and rock 'n' roll.

"We combine the roots of rock 'n' roll element into something that's different," he said. "It's full blown psychedelia."

Many Grateful Dead fans may recognize the David Nelson sound. Nelson first performed with Jerry Garcia and Robert Hunter in the Wildwood Boys during the early '60s. Sless said his opportunity in jamming with the ever-popular legend was a memorable experience.

Each member of the band has a successful past and hopeful future. Sless' talents combine the sounds of a guitar and a pedal steel player, which resembles a steel guitar with bending strings. He admits the instrument caught his attention because so few musicians it.

"I remember that I was pretty young when I got my pedal steel," he said. "They just weren't as common, and I found myself trying to get that sound on the guitar."

Sless' musical abilities have grown from personal dedication and a drive to perform. Learning by ear at an early age, Sless said he has never taken instrumental or singing lessons and prefers his own path of learning.

"I was always self-taught," he said. "I learn from other people that I hear and move from there."

On a return trip to Carbondale, Sless said he is enthusiastic about tonight's performance and hopes to catch a glimpse of the outdoors while in town.

"I am really looking forward to this show," he said. "When we were there last, I got to see a part of Illinois I never knew existed. It was incredible."

Athletic director search turns out to be a slow process

ANDY EGENSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The SIU Athletic Department is closer to filling its vacancy for an associate athletic director after a 16-month search.

Meanwhile, a search committee to find a permanent athletic director will meet Friday morning. Interim Chancellor John Jackson did not comment about the committee members or the applications his office has received.

Jim Hart, former athletic director at SIU, stepped down from his position in January after 10 years of service. Harold Bardo has taken charge of the Athletic Department on an interim basis since Hart's departure.

Bardo has shown frustration with the rate of activity to place the new associate director. "I wish this thing was done six months ago," Bardo told the Daily Egyptian two weeks ago. "It would make it a lot easier on me."

Bardo was unavailable for comment about either searches this week.

Bardo's future in Saluki athletics is uncertain at this time. His contract expires in June, but he recently hinted that the amount of support the University gives to keep head men's basketball coach Bruce Weber at SIU could dictate his willingness to stay on as athletic director.

"If we're able to do some of the things I think we need to get done, then I would put my name in the hat," Bardo said in September. "If we aren't able to get those things done, I would remove my name."

Rick Walker, men's swimming coach and search committee chairman, said the committee submitted five of the 15 names to Bardo to begin the interview process.

Walker is uncertain of the timetable as to when the position will be filled and implemented into the program.

The top three candidates for the associate athletic director are Nancy Bandy, assistant to the athletic director at SIU; Lana Richmond, a member of the coaching staff on both the softball and volleyball teams at Southeast Missouri State; and Cynthia Jones, an SIUC alumna and a senior council member of a law practice firm that focuses on NCAA compliance and infractions. There are also two alternate candidates.

City Council approves contract for towing

The Carbondale City Council approved 4-1 a one-year towing contract of $14,950 to Rich's Towing of Murphysboro Tuesday night.

The towing contract only applies to towns that are at the city's request rather than private.

Councilman Brad Cole said he voted against the action because he did not fully understand the way the contract worked after he asked for an explanation.

He also said he was upset that the city waited until Sept. 29 to get bids from the company, when they knew the yearly contract would expire in October.

Because of several residents' requests, the council approved the placement of a three-way stop at the intersection of South Dixon Avenue and West Walnut Street. In April, the council approved lowering the speed limit, but residents still had safety concerns.

Finally, the council approved an ordinance consistent with an Illinois law making it illegal to park a vehicle with expired registration on public roadways.

Leader steps down to deal with pregnancy

The president of Emerson College's student government has found herself in the midst of two terms — one of which she says she'll have to give up so she can carry the load of the other.

"I am resigning from (the campus presidency) because I am 11 weeks pregnant, and I plan on continuing with the pregnancy," Kat Steiger, 21, said, stunning students throughout campus.

Steiger, a senior, said other factors figured into her decision, including a demanding internship, job stress and her upcoming graduation. She has not said whether she'll also be getting married.

Steiger's resignation throws an already understaffed student government in more of a lurch. Of the 10 open seats in last spring's student elections, only one was contested. Steiger is hoping she can hold on until students elect a new president later this month. So far, two other students have applied for the job.

OUR WORD

Poshard is a man of action

Students said they wanted more parking, and the University responded with a plan that will add 115 green decal spaces to the west end of Lot 59, which is just west of the Lesar Law Building. As parking is a permanent dilemma on our campus, we were pleasantly surprised at the swift action by Vice Chancellor for Administration Glenn Poshard.

The addition of the parking spaces could begin as early as next week with the birth of 25 gravel spaces at the west end of Lot 59. We commend Poshard and the University staff who will make this simple solution a reality.

Previous to the University solution, Undergraduate Student Government dutifully proposed solutions involving the possibility of green stickers parking in red and blue spaces after a designated time of day. Concerns also were expressed about students with night classes who would be commuting to campus and needing a place to park at those later hours.

Instead of taking a whole semester to plan and let the issue die in a committee, Poshard pulled a solution out of an already existing problem. Students were already making makeshift rows in the grass when all the spaces were full, so it seemed logical to turn that grassy area into parking spaces and eliminate the tickets. If the bidding process required to construct the remaining 90 spaces progresses quickly as well, the parking division will have a little less work, and students will have a little less to complain about.

With the expediency of this response, the Daily Egyptian wants to remind the University it is also a good idea to make sure these spaces have adequate lighting to ensure safety. More parking does little good if students are too afraid to use the spaces for fear of a dark area.

The birth of these spaces will only add to the recruitment and retention mission the green storage spaces were intended to assist. We pray this is a sign of things to come from our new vice chancellor at a time when progress is slow at our campus. It would be nice to see some other student and University concerns addressed at a similar pace with equally simple solutions. Unfortunately, this isn't always possible, but with continued leadership and input from Poshard, it might happen more frequently.

Pigs don't fly and neither do their macho business scams

I don't really consider myself a feminist. I shave my legs. Heck, I even date a Republican. But there are some aspects of our society that are so asinine, they simply must be remedied with a little dose of estrogen.

Recently, I was involved in a fender-bender on the Strip. Because the other driver admitted she was entirely at fault and offered to pay for my car's damages, I left the scene of the accident feeling pretty confident things would turn out okay.

Oh, how naive we women can be when we forget we are living in a man's world.

After bringing my mechanic's estimate to the other driver's insurance agency, I was promised use of a rental car while mine was being repaired. The agent told me to wait until I had scheduled an appointment at the body shop, and then call the rental company. The insurance agency would arrange for a substitute car at no expense to me.

So, bright and early Monday morning, I dialed the number of the rental company. After volunteering my name and claim number to the male representative on the phone, I was first told that there were no available vehicles left for me to rent.

"Are you telling me that nowhere in your entire lot is there something with four wheels that can get me to class this morning?" I asked him.

"Well, Cupcake, we've got a few cars left up here this morning, but understand that you are going to have to lay out some cash of your own if you want to be driving today," the man told me.

"Oh no, see, this wreck wasn't my fault, and the insurance company said to just tell you what happened, and that they would pay for me to have a replacement car," I explained.

"Well, Sugar," said the Neanderthal, "that might work, except all we have left here today are big, fancy luxury cars, and I'm sure your insurance company would want you in something smaller and cheaper. You understand what I'm saying here, right?"

I told the man I was pretty damn sure it wasn't my fault; that their vehicle stock was obviously inadequate for their amount of business, and that I didn't think it mattered what kind of car he had left because it was the responsibility of the insurance company to see that I had something to drive.

"Listen, Baby Doll," he continued in a sugary-sweet tone of voice. "I know you're confused right now, and you're probably a little bit scared, and that's okay. Most women are the same way, so you'll just have to trust me on this one. Now what you need to do, Sweetheart, is hang up the phone, bring your credit card and come down here to the lot so we can get this all straightened out and pick you out a nice car."

I informed this weasel there was no way in hell I was going to give him a red cent, and that I was feeling neither confused nor scared, but rather hatred aimed at conniving scoundrels. And at that, I hung up on him.

Handing the phone to my father, I watched in indignant amazement as he called the dealership back himself, spoke with the representative for about two minutes, and then headed off to pick up our magically reserved rental car.

Ironically, the vehicle my father returned with minutes later turned out to be a Dodge Neon, which, unless you have the body mass and brain mentality of a ferret, can scarcely be considered a "big, fancy, luxury car."

So, what is it that makes these men think they can try to manipulate women, and we'll never be the wiser? I have a clue for all of you "good old boys" out there. This is not 1959, and I am not just some dumb brunette you can play for a fool. This is the '90s, and the bicycle I chose to pedal to school this week instead of your lousy car says much more for my character than anything found between your legs.

I can woman, hear my tires squeal.

Take back your rights as an individual

DEAR EDITOR,

As a student here at SIUC, I tend to take it for granted that, while I am a resident of this campus and a paying member of our academic society, I am to be treated with all the respect for my person that is due to any citizen of a society.

I recently became involved with the Students for Excellence in Education, a non-profit organization that is interested in preserving the rights and freedoms of students on our campus. From them, I have learned of legislation in the Student Handbook that allows my parents to be contacted in the event that I violate any University policy involving alcohol or controlled substances.

This seemed perfectly reasonable to me, until it was pointed out that, having reached the age of maturity at 18, I am now a legal adult, meaning I retain the right (as stated in the U.S. Constitution) to due process in any legal matter, which, so far as I am aware, does not include contacting the parents of an offender. Eighteen-year-olds who are not students would not have their parents contacted; being a student does not mean I have relinquished my rights or responsibilities in legal proceedings.

Furthermore, the legislation also provides for the release of personal information at the administrator's "discretion." This makes it possible for students who are in favor of being free from such action, while those who are disliked may be unfairly punished. This potential for abuse of the student body cannot be allowed.

I have discovered that I can't take it for granted that my rights are being preserved while I am not watching, and neither can any other student here. If it is necessary to take action to ensure that we will be treated in the manner we deserve, then we should not hesitate to do just that.

If any student is interested in helping to preserve these rights through positive, intelligent means, they should come to the Oct. 14 meeting of the Board of Trustees here in Carbondale. There, we may be able to make sure that legislation such as what I've discussed is not used to deprive us of our personal freedoms and responsibilities as adults.

Kodak gives grant for film craftsmen

Worldwide Student Program provides SIUC student filmmakers $1000 of film credit

TRAVIS MORSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

For Faustina Robinson, a senior cinema major from Chicago, her documentary about a female impersonator at Club Traz will be a lot less expensive to make thanks to the Fall 1999 Eastman Kodak Film Grant Awards.

Robinson, along with fellow student filmmakers Tom Mogle, Kurush Canteenwalla, Nate Mahoney, Jason Turner and David Hook, will split about $1,000 worth of credit to buy film stock from Kodak.

The grant is part of Kodak's Worldwide Student Program, which provides scholarships and film grants to universities across the country.

Loren Cocking, assistant professor of cinema, said the grant proves that SIUC is a significant film school.

"They do recognize SIUC as a major film school," Cocking said. "It's always important for student filmmakers to get as much help as they can."

Mogle, a graduate student in cinema from

Barrington, who received 1,200 feet of film, is planning to use the free film on his graduate thesis film.

He said Kodak is building a positive relationship with SIUC.

"I think it definitely builds good will," Mogle said. "They realize that future filmmakers are coming from the schools and they know it's important to make that connection early."

The film grants were not given out on a random basis.

Cinema and photography students had to submit a film proposal, a budget and an example of their past work to qualify for the grant.

Six faculty members from the department then judged the proposals and chose five promising projects to award.

"We were trying to guess which proposals would be more likely to be a good finished project," Cocking said.

However, Cocking said the proposal alone was not enough to secure a grant.

"It was a combination of proposal and past work," Cocking said.

"If someone had made a wonderful film in the past, but had a terrible proposal, they weren't chosen. Also, if someone had a great proposal, but made a bad film in the past, they wouldn't get the grant. It was a complicated process."

Robinson, whose documentary might have cost well over $1,200 without the grant, said the award came as a complete surprise.

"I submitted my proposal, but didn't know what to expect," Robinson said. "When I got the grant, I was very surprised."

She said the grant both adds and subtracts the amount of pressure she feels to make a great film.

"It's wonderful to do a film that gets wide support from the community," Robinson said. "The grant relieves some of the financial pressure, but in other ways it adds pressure."

Now, a lot more people are going to be watching to see how good you do."

Turner, a senior cinema major from Chicago who received about 800 feet of free film, is using his award for a senior thesis film he is making with Hook.

Turner calls the grant a great advantage for independent student filmmakers.

"The budget of my film is big so this grant takes some of the pressure off," Turner said. "I'm grateful to both the faculty and Kodak. It's a great award because it's done through the school and is pushed by the faculty."

Cocking said Kodak also has the opportunity to benefit from these kinds of charitable endeavors in the long run.

"It costs Kodak money now, but they know the students they are helping today will be their biggest customers later on," Cocking said.

"It's funny because in the old days, Kodak was considered to be a corporate enemy to independent filmmakers. Now, students see them as a facilitating firm that is, at times, generous."

"The budget of my film is big so this grant takes some of the pressure off. I'm grateful to both the faculty and Kodak. It's a great award because it's done through the school and is pushed by the faculty."

AT TIAA-CREF, LOW EXPENSES ARE A HIGH PRIORITY.

All financial companies charge operating fees and expenses — some more than others. Of course, the lower the expenses you pay, the better. That way, more of your money goes where it should — toward building a comfortable future.

As the largest retirement system in the world,¹ we have among the lowest expenses in the insurance and mutual fund industries.²

In fact, TIAA-CREF's 0.35% average fund expenses are a fraction of the expense charges of comparable funds.³ It's one reason why Morningstar says, "TIAA-CREF sets the standard in the financial services industry."

A focus on your future

Of course, expenses are only one factor to consider when you make an investment decision. Morningstar also noted our commitment to "consumer education, service" and "solid investment performance." Because that can make a difference in the long run, too.

At TIAA-CREF, we believe people would like to spend more in retirement, not on their retirement company. Today, over two million people count on that approach to help them build financial security. So can you.

without data, and right now, I don't have the data," Antonelli said.

When Undergraduate Student Government President Sean Henry asked Antonelli if he would listen to student input and if he would take it to the administration, Antonelli said he always listens to what the students have to say.

Antonelli

"I believe in team playing — more heads are better than one. I would never make a decision all by myself," Antonelli said. "I would be an advocate for the students."

While speaking with the few students who attended the forum, Antonelli said he feels his top responsibilities for the position would be to make sure students have a productive stay here. He also said it is extremely important to him to make certain that students graduate and go on to have productive careers.

"If you work for the University, you work for one mission," he said "You work to see the students graduate."

One of the five students who attended the forum, Lincoln Brimage, a freshman in architectural design from Chicago, said he came to see what Antonelli could provide the University.

"I just wanted to get an idea of what he had to offer," Brimage said.

Brimage said he liked some of what Antonelli had to say, but he thought Antonelli's responses about what he would like to change on campus could have been more specific.

"He kind of let a lot of stuff float around," Brimage said. "He does seem like somebody you could talk to, though."

The tone of the faculty forum was much different Wednesday. Though only two faculty members attended, Antonelli elaborated more on some of the ideas he had for this campus.

Antonelli said he would like to see more learning centers and computer labs added to the dorms. Impressed with the "state-of-the-art Rec Center," Antonelli said he would also like to start some kind of outreach program for freshmen to encourage healthful living.

"Let's get the students into the [Recreation Center] rather than the bars," he said.

Antonelli also said he would like to cross the line between Academic Affairs and Student Affairs to get the two departments working together.

"I would carry the flag to all the departments," Antonelli said. "I told [administrators] that if I came here, I would be knocking on their doors."

Antonelli also told the faculty that he would like to change SIUC's image as a party for the University of North Carolina system, and Sharon E. Whittaker, vice president for Student Affairs at Stillman College in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Antonelli visited campus Tuesday and Wednesday to visit with campus constituency groups, and Whittaker will visit SIUC Oct. 21 and 22.

People interested in reviewing any of the candidates' vitae go to Anthony Hall, rooms 14 and 309A; Woody Hall, Room 326B; Kesnar Hall, Room 210;

Washington Square D, Room 306; the Student Development office, Student Center third floor; or the Recreation Center administrative office.

Harvey Welch, current vice chancellor for Student Affairs, announced in April he plans to retire in December.

The search committee, headed by Guernsey, selected the finalists after reviewing applications and nominations from the original pool of 31 candidates.

Though the final choice ultimately will have to be approved by the SIU Board of Trustees, interim Chancellor John Jackson said he hopes to have his recommendation to SIU President Ted Sanders by the end of October.

school by encouraging students and staff to stop referring to the University in that manner.

"I think if all of us here would start talking differently about SIU, that would help," he said. "I think SIU is a great school; I don't think it's a party school."

Doug Bedient, a professor of curriculum and instruction, said he was impressed with Antonelli's credentials and what he had to say.

"I thought his background was very appropriate; he has a distinguished publication record, too," Bedient said. "It appeared he's a data gatherer who studies his issues before deciding what to do."

Antonelli is currently the associate vice president for Student Services and Special Programs for the University of North Carolina System with his office at the Chapel Hill, N.C., campus.

Antonelli is a Southern Illinois native and SIUC alumnus.

He was born in Du Quoin and received his bachelor's in political science and history in 1963 from SIUC and studied political science at the University of Hamburg, Germany, in 1962.

He then received his master's in political science and education from the University of Wisconsin in 1968, and later returned to Carbondale to get his doctorate in education in 1972.

Ask Gus the LOVE Guru:
Dear Gus,
I think I'm obsessed with my psychology teacher. I can't concentrate on class - I'm constantly staring at him. But I can't just tell him that. What would be a subtle way of letting him know?

A: SUBTLE! You're obsessed with a faculty member for God's sake! As a student and employee of the Daily Egyptian, I can hardly condone this affair. But if there is a non-faculty member you're obsessed with, send him a Sweetest Day ad in the D.E.'s October 15th edition for only $500.

Women's tennis team learns to cope with injuries together

PAUL WLEKINSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN

As if the closest-knit team in SIU athletics needed another reason to bond.

The SIU women's tennis team, probably the best example of team unity in all of Saluki sports, discovered an unfortunate means to bond once more.

"I think sometimes you have adversity when you have problems, and I think you can ultimately draw a team together, and the team will rise to the occasion," said SIU women's tennis coach Judy Auld about the onslaught of injuries her team is facing as it begins the Missouri Valley Conference Individual Championships in Springfield, Mo., this weekend.

"And I think that's what this team is capable of, and needs to do going into this weekend. I think it's very important and use it as a learning experience."

Deteriorated by injuries to four of the team's seven members, the Salukis forfeited a tournament last weekend in Chicago. Auld hoped the time off would allow her team to heal for the critical MVC tournament this weekend.

Sophomore Simona Petrutu, who dominated last year's MVC

Individual Championships with a 3-0 record in the No. 1 flight, has been cleared to play after suffering a pulled back muscle two weeks ago.

Petrutu will have to decide if she is healthy enough to play, or avoid the risk of further damaging her back for the spring season. Furthermore, Petrutu is the first player under Auld to be invited to the All-American Qualifier in Los Angeles.

The recognition not only for Petrutu, but for SIU and the women's tennis team, would help jump start the Salukis' goal of regional and national attention and respect. Sophomore teammate Pamela Floro was also invited to go with Petrutu as her doubles partner and an alternate.

"It's really disappointing, because I ultimately had to make a decision whether or not to keep her name in there or pull her out with her back the way it is," Auld said. "They would have been playing next weekend."

Auld's dilemma is a double edge sword. If she would allow Petrutu to participate in the prestigious tournament, she risks further injuring her top player and a possible weak showing and possibly excluding her from further tournaments of this magnitude.

However, Petrutu and Auld elected to decline the acceptance because of the back pains Petrutu is suffering.

"As a coach, I have to also do what is ethically right," Auld said. "And if I don't think she is capable of playing, I can't see where I should knock another player out from being able to go."

Petrutu's doubles partner, Pamela Floro, is also hampered by injuries as she is overcoming a strained buttock muscle. Sophomore Maria Villarreal's shoulder injury will exclude her from the tournament, while classmate Ana Serrot's health is questionable following a hospital emergency room visit because of personal health problems.

"We're just waiting for her to get cleared to play by a physician," Auld said. "She just had some health problems (including tendinitis in her wrist) and I think they will be cleared up, and she'll be okay to play. She wants to play so bad that I think even with out practice, she'll be able to play."

With all the injuries, including sophomore Erika Ochoa's bum knee, it appears the Salukis will not be as strong as last year's team which recorded an immaculate 9-0 record in the top-three flights. Will this close-knit team pull together through adversity and repeat?

"If we were at full strength, I would," Auld said. "I think realistically we have a shot to do well at a lot of positions — not just the top three, but even deeper."

Trash-talking not recommended

ANDREW BAGNATO
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Two years ago, an unidentified Michigan State player was quoted as saying "Michigan is dead" the week before the Spartans met the Wolverines. Michigan beat Michigan State's 23-7 loss.

Last year, Spartan wide receiver Plaxico Burress predicted he would have a big day against the Michigan secondary. Burress caught six passes and scored a touchdown. But the Wolverines prevailed 29-17.

"It was my first Michigan game," Burress told reporters in East Lansing. "I got a little overexcited and thought that trash-talking was all part of it."

It used to be. But Spartan coach Nick Saban has told his players to tone down the rhetoric as they prepare for third-ranked Michigan's invasion Saturday.

"I don't think you ever want to do anything to rile up your opponent," Saban said. "We don't believe and we don't want our players to believe trash-talking or talking somebody else down is a way to have success."

Down in Ann Arbor, Wolverine wooders Marcus Ray and Charles Woodson are gone. Team captains have made it clear trash talk won't be tolerated.

"You don't want to put your team in a position of having to defend what you've said," Michigan quarterback Tom Brady said. "There's no reason to give them anything to put on their bulletin board."

wanted to be over .500; they wanted to not play on the first day in the [MVC tournament]. Now, hopefully we'll pick up our goals, and they'll be a little bit higher."

Weber heaped credit on his players, especially senior forward Chris Thunell and senior center Derrick Tilmon, for embracing the work ethic he wants associated with Saluki basketball and making his first year a pleasant one.

"Any success I had was because of the kids," Weber said about last season's success. "Our staff is lucky that we have Thunell and Tilmon — they're motivated kids that love basketball and love life. They're just good people."

Festivities for the upcoming year will commence Oct. 15 as midnight approaches, when both the men's and women's basketball teams will rock Davies Gymnasium for the Salukis' version of "Midnight Madness" — a fan-oriented practice session beginning at the stroke of midnight the first day the NCAA allows practice.

The event has been moved this year to the cozy environs of Davies Gym from the SIU Arena in order to facilitate a more intimate and vibrant atmosphere. In an effort to reach out to the student body, the coaches will be cooking for students and supplying free food to those who arrive early.

Along with Weber, Saluki fans are chomping at the bit for the season to get underway. Season ticket sales are up, indicating renewed zest for SIU hoops in the community, and the coach hopes students will also be at the Arena in full force this season.

"That's what college basketball is about," Weber said. "It's our school; it's the University's team, and you would hope that the students would back it."

Weber spent much of the summer on the recruiting trail, and now must switch gears back to the X's and O's of coaching.

"For me, the most fun time is those first three weeks, because you're putting your system in, you're teaching," Weber said. "You don't have to be on the road, so you're actually with your team without any distractions."

Weber will not have to teach his system to a whole new coaching staff, as he did last year. Lynn Mitchem replaces Alan Major as the lone new Saluki assistant.

SIU figures to be in better shape with player personnel, as well. Although the Salukis will miss Monte Jenkins, who was the team's top scorer and defender as a senior last season, the majority of SIU's firepower will be back with another year of seasoning. Plus, the Salukis welcome freshman guard Kent Williams and freshman forwards Jermaine Dearman, Brad Korn and Sylvester Willis.

The recruiting class is hailed by most observers as an excellent one, with Williams and Dearman expected to be major contributors to the squad immediately.

However, Weber is careful not to overburden his freshmen. Ray Austin, a promising recruit for Valley rival Illinois State University, recently left ISU after just a few weeks on campus, saying he lost his desire to play basketball.

It's common for freshmen to feel overwhelmed upon arriving on campus, so Weber eases them into his conditioning regimen and tempers his criticism in an effort to make sure his newcomers are content.

"When you recruit a kid, you tell them how great they are," Weber said. "Then once they get to campus, they're just a regular student-athlete... sometimes, it's a culture shock for kids."

So far, the coach is pleased with his newcomers.

"They're very good athletes and they've done well in our conditioning program," Weber said. "We feel pretty good about it — now when practice starts, and we start trying to teach and get after them, we'll have to see how they react to that."

"They've passed the first test, now they've got to pass the second test."

Weber is a big proponent of having his players work out the kinks in their games during the summer. Before his players dispersed for the summer, Weber met with them individually and discussed what aspects of their game needed to be honed. He expects it to be evident who took summer improvement seriously early in practice.

In any event, Saluki players will be asked to heighten their intensity starting next weekend. After all, if the Salukis want to make some noise in March, they'll have to do things right in October.

"The more I'm in the business, I see that if you don't put something in early and get them to do it over and over and create habits, it's very difficult to do it later on," Weber said. "It's the part [of the year] that makes or breaks your season."

Weber can't hardly wait

Head basketball coach eagerly awaits new season

JAY SCHWAB
DAILY EGYPTIAN

College basketball junkies across the country can awaken from seven months of hibernation as October brings unmistakable signs that a new season is knocking on the door.

The preview magazines are already hitting the newsstands. Incoming recruits are becoming acquainted with weight rooms and running.

And in just more than a week, the sound of squeaky sneakers and bouncing basketballs will echo in college arenas.

The SIU men's basketball team will start building upon the momentum it accumulated last winter when practice for the 1999-2000 season begins Oct. 16.

The upcoming season is the most highly anticipated year for Saluki basketball since the powerhouse SIU teams of the early and mid '90s. Last year, in his debut as a head coach, Bruce Weber guided a surprising Saluki team to a 15-12 record after three straight losing campaigns. As the year progressed, the Salukis drew larger and larger crowds to the SIU Arena.

Despite the enthusiasm generated, the Salukis finished the season with a whimper, bowing out of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament in the quarterfinals against Bradley University. Weber said last year's squad may have become satisfied too quickly.

"We started bad, and we finished bad," Weber said. "We played pretty good in between. "Maybe we had met our goal mentally. They

SEMO too much to handle; SIU volleyball team loses its third straight match

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN

By the time the SIU volleyball team's offense showed up Tuesday night, the damage had already been done.

The Salukis played host to non-conference, regional rival Southeast Missouri State University Tuesday night in Davies Gymnasium, losing their third straight match 3-0 (15-7, 15-3, 15-13).

After showing a glimpse of offensive production in games one and two against the Otahkians, the Saluki offense finally came to life in game three when trailing 11-5.

The Salukis (3-11, 1-6) rattled off four straight points and would eventually come within one point at 14-13, but the Otahkians ended the Saluki comeback scoring the final point and leaving Saluki head coach Sonya Locke searching for answers.

"For some reason, we started very tentative, and I'm not quite sure why that is," Locke said. "They knew they were down and then they came out ready to play the third game, and unfortunately it was too little too late."

Locke has become all too familiar with her team's inconsistent, and sometimes total absence, of offense this season.

"There's no question that they can, it's just putting it all together and doing it for a long period of time," Locke said. "We have short sprints, and short sprints aren't going to win a match.

"We have our highs and our lows. We're slow at fighting through our lows, and it's tough to maintain the highs."

Tuesday night was just another example of Locke's squad showing their promise, however only momentarily.

The Salukis were out-hit .350 to .220 against the Otahkians (12-5, 4-1) and had only one player record double digit kills, freshman outside hitter Kristie Kemner with 10.

Kemner also recorded 10 digs, while fellow freshman outside hitters Qiana Nelson and Tara Cains had nine and six kills, respectively.

The Otahkians were led by junior outside hitter Krista Haukap's 13 kills and 11 digs and senior outside hitter Jackie Derwort's nine kills and 11 digs. Senior setter Amy Henken dished out 39 assists.

Although the Otahkians were a credible opponent, the Salukis main nemesis Tuesday night was themselves and their slow start.

"Coach always gets on us about how we are a slow starting team and [Tuesday] we showed that," Cains said. "But in the third game, I felt we came out, and we didn't have anything to lose, and we played for fun."

Now the main objective for the Salukis is to put forth a performance consistent to Tuesday night's game three effort for an entire match.

"We've been practicing hitting everyday; we work on the hitting machine; I think that will soon show up on the court," Cains said.

"We're going to continue to work hard to improve and do everything we can to get out there and play like the team we know we are, because we are a strong team."
